Hotel Vintage

PORTLAND
 (5) Kimpton Hotels' new concept for Hotel Vintage in Portland celebrates a certain type of vintage—that of wine. Each of the 117 remodeled rooms is named for an Oregon winery, and the two-story lobby features the Bacchus Bar, a 60-seat Italian cocktail lounge, and, as a striking centerpiece, a blackened steel spiral staircase that floats you up to a game room. Seattle's Duwamish Design Associates drove the new look, which deploys wine's rich colors in a chic modern way.

Skwachays Lodge

VANCOUVER
 (6) With 18 boutique-style rooms created by six local interior designers collaborating with six First Nations artists, Vancouver's Skwachays offers guests a bounty of opportunities to engage with local Aboriginal culture. All profits from the hotel and the on-site Urban Aboriginal Fair Trade gallery go to the Vancouver Native Housing Society, which provides safe, secure, and affordable housing to the city's Aboriginal residents.

The Lark

BOZEMAN, MT
 (7) What was once a rundown, 1960s-era motor inn is now the uber-cool Lark. The retro-inspired digs in downtown Bozeman, Montana, celebrate local artists in 38 rooms, and the on-site restaurant is a taco truck in a retrofitted vintage trailer. It's a low-key destination hotel with hipster style and a sense of humor.

Fairmont Pacific Rim

VANCOUVER
 (8) Light and art come together in the new permanent installation at Vancouver's Fairmont Pacific Rim hotel. Designed by Boco cofounder César Azbel, the titanic glass-and-steel entrance sculpture, 16, evokes branches with shimmering-glass leaves and is sure to become a landmark work in a city with a blooming public-art persona.
