When most people think of Montana it's most likely a picture of a tent or lodge that probably pops into mind, so I was shocked when I got word about this chic modern hotel located in Bozeman that would be the perfect home base for an awesome guys weekend or mancation without worrying about losing the fun of having running water and cable :)

The LARK is super quirky and I guess that's what the pioneer / independent spirit of Montana is destined to create. The hotel was originally built in the 1960's but it has now re-opened this year as a "community-powered" space that features guest rooms that are individually outfitted with art made by local Montana artists. Instead of a Denny's in the parking lot, they have an onsite taco truck, and instead of a concierge there is a team of guides that are tasked with the goal of helping you create the perfect Montana adventure during your stay.
